IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

CLINTON REILLY,

No. C 06-04332 SI

Plaintiff,

ORDER DENYING DEFENDANTS’ MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
BASED ON PLAINTIFF’S LACK OF

v.

MEDIANEWS GROUP, INC, et al.,

Defendants.

Plaintiff Clinton Reilly brought this antitrust case to block and undo a series of transactions through which, he claims, the past and present owners of the major San Francisco Bay Area newspapers have begun to consolidate ownership of those newspapers, to divide up geographic markets, and ultimately to forego competing with each other.¹ Pursuant to an expedited case management schedule stipulated to by the parties, trial is currently set for April 30, 2007.

On April 6, 2007, the Court heard argument on defendants’ motion for summary judgment based on plaintiff’s lack of standing. Defendants argue that because plaintiff is not threatened with any “antitrust injury,” he does not have standing to bring this suit. Having considered the arguments of the parties and the papers submitted, and for good cause shown, the Court DENIES defendants’ motion.

LEGAL STANDARD

Summary adjudication is proper when “the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any ¹The order issued on November 28, 2006 contains a more detailed summary of the relevant facts of this case.

1 material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law.” Fed. R. Civ. P.
2 56(c). In a motion for summary judgment, “[if] the moving party for summary judgment meets its initial 3 burden of identifying for the court those portions of the materials on file that it believes demonstrate the 4 absence of any genuine issues of material fact, the burden of production then shifts so that the non-
5 moving party must set forth, by affidavit or as otherwise provided in Rule 56, specific facts showing that 6 there is a genuine issue for trial.” T.W. Elec. Service, Inc. v. Pac. Elec. Contractors Ass’n, 809 F.2d 7 626, 630 (9th Cir. 1987) (citing Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317 (1986)).

8 In judging evidence at the summary judgment stage, the Court does not make credibility 9 determinations or weigh conflicting evidence, and draws all inferences in the light most favorable to the 10 non-moving party. See T.W. Electric, 809 F.2d at 630-31 (citing Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., Ltd. v.
11 Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574 (1986)); Ting v. United States, 927 F.2d 1504, 1509 (9th Cir. 1991).
12 The evidence presented by the parties must be admissible. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e). Conclusory, 13 speculative testimony in affidavits and moving papers is insufficient to raise genuine issues of fact and 14 defeat summary judgment. See Thornhill Publ’g Co., Inc. v. GTE Corp., 594 F.2d 730, 738 (9th Cir.
15 1979).

17 DISCUSSION

18 Defendants argue that plaintiff lacks standing to bring this suit because the actions of which he 19 complains do not threaten him with any antitrust injury. Plaintiff responds that, as a subscriber to the 20 San Francisco Chronicle and frequent purchaser of other Bay Area newspapers, he is threatened with 21 antitrust injury because defendants’ actions are likely to result in price increases and diminished
22 diversity of content.²

24 I. Chief Judge Walker’s standing analysis in Reilly I

25 The issue of plaintiff’s standing arose in prior case before Chief Judge Walker, Reilly v. The 26 Hearst Corp., 107 F. Supp. 2d 1192 (N.D. Cal. 2000) (“Reilly I”). Chief Judge Walker’s standing

27
28 ²Plaintiff also argues in a footnote that he has standing as an advertiser. As discussed below, this argument fails.

1 analysis in Reilly I supports a finding of standing in this case. In Reilly I plaintiff alleged that Hearst's
2 acquisition of the San Francisco Chronicle violated sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act. As in this
3 case, plaintiff brought his claims under section 16 of the Clayton Act. Id. at 1194. At the time, Hearst 4 published the San Francisco Examiner, which was a major daily and an active competitor to the 5 Chronicle. Id. at 1193-94.

6 Before proceeding to the merits, Chief Judge Walker analyzed whether plaintiff had standing
7 to bring his claims "as a subscriber to the Chronicle and single-copy purchaser of the Examiner . . ."
8 Id. at 1194. He concluded that Reilly did have standing, stating:

9 Plaintiff claims that the challenged transactions would eliminate one of only two 10 providers of daily newspaper news, features and opinion in what plaintiff contends is the 11 relevant market. . . . These claims, while novel, would appear to state a cognizable 12 injury to plaintiff as a consumer of newspaper news, features and opinion and to 13 competition in that market; if proved, such a claim would entitle plaintiff to injunctive 14 relief under section 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 26.

15 Id. at 1195. In reaching this conclusion, Chief Judge Walker relied heavily on the congressional intent
16 regarding newspaper markets reflected in the Newspaper Preservation Act ("NPA"), 15 U.S.C. §§ 17 1801-1804. He stated:

18 Standing analysis in this case is informed, in part, by the [NPA]. The NPA provides an 19 antitrust exemption for an otherwise unlawful combination or merger of two 20 newspapers' business operations if the market for newspaper circulation and advertising 21 does not provide sufficient revenue to support independent publication of the 22 newspapers. In that situation, the NPA permits two newspaper firms to combine their 23 business operations as long as they continue to produce separate newspapers.

24 Although the NPA does not confer affirmative rights on newspaper readers or advertisers
25 or competing newspaper firms, the Sherman Act and Clayton Act should be read bearing 26 in mind the legislative purposes that prompted enactment of the NPA; namely,
27 encouragement of multiple sources of newspaper news, features and opinion. The NPA 28 thus imports distinctly non-economic considerations into the antitrust statutes, which otherwise exclusively confine their scope to matters of economic consequence. Under this statutory framework, the elimination of a newspaper represents a cognizable injury to interests protected by the antitrust laws, and this injury supplies a ground for standing under Article III.

Id.

Defendants here argue that Chief Judge Walker's finding of standing is inapplicable because this case does not involve the NPA. In Reilly I, defendants argue, the NPA was at issue because as part of the challenged acquisition, the Chronicle and the Examiner would be terminating a joint operating agreement ("JOA") that was permitted under the NPA. According to defendants, in Reilly I plaintiff

1 “sued to prevent termination of the San Francisco JOA and to ensure the continued existence of the 2 Examiner.” Reply at 3:1-2. This Court agrees with plaintiff that defendants’ argument misinterprets
3 both the nature of Reilly I, and Chief Judge Walker’s use of the NPA in the Reilly I standing analysis.

4 Plaintiff in Reilly I sued to maintain the existence of two viable, editorially independent 5 newspaper competitors in the San Francisco market. Whether the competitors existed pursuant to the 6 JOA, or as fully independent papers, was not plaintiff’s concern. Moreover, Chief Judge Walker
7 ultimately treated the proposed merger of the JOA competitors as a court would treat the proposed 8 merger of any competitors. He stated: “a transaction terminating a JOA is subject to ordinary antitrust
9 scrutiny.” Id. at 1203. “The court concludes that in an antitrust challenge to a proposed merger of JOA 10 newspapers, the defendants may avoid liability by proving the traditional failing company defense . .
11 . . .” Id. The existence of the JOA was thus critical to understanding and analyzing the facts of the case, 12 but it did not alter the Court’s analytical antitrust framework. Reilly I was not an “NPA case” or a “JOA 13 case”; it was an antitrust case, like this one, dealing with consolidation in a local newspaper market.

14 Similarly, the standing analysis did not depend on the involvement of the NPA in the facts of 15 Reilly I, as defendants here suggest. Chief Judge Walker simply noted that the NPA reflects a 16 congressional concern with “encouragement of multiple sources of newspaper news, features and 17 opinion,” and “the Sherman Act and Clayton Act should be read bearing in mind [these] legislative 18 purposes.” Id. at 1195. There is no reason to think that Congress was only concerned with newspaper 19 diversity in situations where the NPA is involved.

20 This Court agrees with the analysis of standing made in Reilly I. The NPA evidences that 21 Congress values the existence of separate sources of newspaper content in a community, and that loss 22 of separate sources injures consumers. The existence of the NPA thus strongly suggests that loss of 23 diversity of content is a “threatened loss or damage ‘of the type the antitrust laws were designed to 24 prevent and that flows from that which makes defendants’ acts unlawful.’” Cargill, Inc. v. Monfort of 25 Colorado, Inc., 479 U.S. 104, 113 (1986). This conclusion is consistent with the Supreme Court’s broad 26 interpretation of the Clayton Act, which “does not confine its protection to consumers, or to purchasers, 27 or to competitors, or to sellers. . . . The Act is comprehensive in its terms and coverage, protecting all 28 who are made victims of the forbidden practices by whomever they may be perpetrated.” Blue Shield

1 of Virginia v. McCreedy, 457 U.S. 465, 472 (1982).

2
3 II. General antitrust standing

4 Even under the traditional antitrust analysis, independent of the newspaper context, plaintiff has 5 standing as a consumer. Plaintiff brings this case under section 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 26, 6 which provides in pertinent part: “[any] person, firm, corporation, or association shall be entitled to sue 7 for and have injunctive relief . . . against threatened loss or damage by a violation of the antitrust laws.
8 . . .” 15 U.S.C. § 26. “[I]n order to seek injunctive relief under § 16, a private plaintiff must allege 9 threatened loss or damage ‘of the type the antitrust laws were designed to prevent and that flows from 10 that which makes defendants’ acts unlawful.’” Cargill, 479 U.S. at 113 (1986); see also Glen Holly
11 Entm’t Inc. v. Tektronix Inc., 352 F.3d 367, 371 (9th Cir. 2003) (“Only those who meet the requirements
12 for ‘antitrust standing’ may pursue a claim under the Clayton Act; and to acquire ‘antitrust standing,’ 13 a plaintiff must adequately allege and eventually prove ‘antitrust injury.’”).

14 In the context of a claim under section 4 of the Clayton Act, which, unlike section 16, provides 15 for monetary damages, the Ninth Circuit summarized the antitrust injury requirement as follows:

16 Antitrust injury is made up of four elements: “(1) unlawful conduct, (2) causing an 17 injury to the plaintiff, (3) that flows from that which makes the conduct unlawful, and 18 (4) that is of the type the antitrust laws were intended to prevent.”

19 In addition, we impose a fifth requirement, that “the injured party be a participant in the 20 same market as the alleged malefactors.” “In other words, the party alleging the injury 21 must be either a consumer of the alleged violator's goods or services or a competitor of 22 the alleged violator in the restrained market.” In fact, and as the district court 23 recognized, “Consumers in the market where trade is allegedly restrained are 24 presumptively the proper plaintiffs to allege antitrust injury.”

25 Glen Holly, 352 F.3d at 372 (citations omitted) (emphasis added).

26 “To maintain an antitrust divestiture suit [(section 16)], a private plaintiff must generally meet
27 all the requirements that apply to the damages [(section 4)] plaintiff, except that the injury itself need 28 only be threatened, damage need not be quantified, and occasionally a party too remote for damages might be granted an injunction.” Lucas Automotive Engineering, Inc. v. Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc., 140 F.3d 1229, 1234 (9th Cir. 1998); see also Cargill, 479 U.S. at 111 (“It is plain that § 16 and § 4 do differ in various ways. For example, § 4 requires a plaintiff to show actual injury, but § 16 requires a

1 showing only of ‘threatened’ loss or damage; similarly, § 4 requires a showing of injury to ‘business
2 or property,’ while § 16 contains no such limitation.”) (citations omitted). “[U]nder both § 16 and § 4 3 the plaintiff must still allege an injury of the type the antitrust laws were designed to prevent.” Cargill,
4 479 U.S. at 111

5 “The central purpose of the antitrust laws, state and federal, is to preserve competition. It is 6 competition . . . that these statutes recognize as vital to the public interest.” Knevelbaard Dairies v.
7 Kraft Foods, Inc., 232 F.3d 979, 988 (9th Cir. 2000). “Every precedent in the field makes clear that the 8 interaction of competitive forces . . . is what will benefit consumers.” Id. The Sherman Act:

9 was enacted in the era of “trusts” and of “combinations” of businesses and of capital 10 organized and directed to control of the market by suppression of competition in the 11 marketing of goods and services, the monopolistic tendency of which had become a 12 matter of public concern. The end sought was the prevention of restraints to free 13 competition in business and commercial transactions which tended to restrict production, 14 raise prices or otherwise control the market to the detriment of purchasers or consumers
15 of goods and services, all of which had come to be regarded as a special form of public 16 injury.

17 Apex Hosiery Co. v. Leader, 310 U.S. 469, 493-94 (1940).

18 A refusal to compete with respect to the package of services offered to customers, no less 19 than a refusal to compete with respect to the price term of an agreement, impairs the 20 ability of the market to advance social welfare by ensuring the provision of desired 21 goods and services to consumers at a price approximating the marginal cost of providing 22 them.

23 FTC v. Indiana Federation of Dentists, 476 U.S. 447, 459 (1986); see also Glen Holly, 352 F.3d at 377
24 (“Antitrust law addresses distribution restraints in order to protect consumers from the higher prices or 25 diminished choices that can sometimes result from limiting intrabrand competition.”) (citation omitted).

26 In Lucas Automotive, 140 F.3d 1229, the Ninth Circuit “decide[d] whether a distributor and 27 downstream purchaser of vintage automobile tires has standing to bring an antitrust action under the 28 Clayton Act against a competitor and supplier for damages and divestiture.” Id. at 1230. The district court had dismissed the plaintiff’s claims on summary judgment because the plaintiff “has not produced any evidence to show that [defendant] has in fact raised these prices on brand name vintage tires.
Therefore, it has not suffered any actual injury.” Id. at 1235 (quoting case). The Ninth Circuit reversed the district court, stating:

We conclude that [plaintiff], . . . as a customer in a market controlled by a monopolist, has standing to assert a § 7 claim for equitable relief, including divestiture, under § 16

1 [of the Clayton Act]. It established a prima facie case, both that it was an active
 2 participant in the vintage tire market and that [defendant's] conduct in that market 3 violated § 7. This showing was thus sufficient to avoid summary judgment on 4 [plaintiff's] Clayton Act § 7 claim for equitable relief.

5 Id. at 1237. In Lucas, therefore, it was sufficient that plaintiff was an active consumer in a market in 6 which there was anti-competitive activity; the Ninth Circuit did not require the plaintiff to present
 7 evidence of a prior or imminent raise in prices. Similarly here, plaintiff is an active consumer in the Bay
 8 Area newspaper market, in which he alleges there is anti-competitive activity.

9 Defendants suggest that Lucas is distinct because here there is no evidence that “a price increase 10 is virtually inevitable, as was the case in Lucas Automotive . . .” Reply at 8:25. Nowhere in Lucas, 11 however, did the Ninth Circuit find or suggest that a price increase was “virtually inevitable.” The 12 Ninth Circuit only found that plaintiff had shown “prima facie, that [defendant]’s conduct threatens 13 ‘substantially to lessen competition’ and ‘tends to create a monopoly’ . . .” 140 F.3d at 1236. Here, 14 whether defendants’ actions threaten to lessen competition, create a monopoly, or raise prices, is the 15 issue the Court must decide after trial. Plaintiff alleges anti-competitive acts in the Bay Area newspaper 16 market, and provides evidence that he is an active consumer in that market, see Reilly Depo.
 17 (Scarborough Decl., Ex. 1) at 47-48, 52-53. This is sufficient under Lucas to defeat summary judgment.
 18 See 140 F.3d at 1237.

19 CONCLUSION

20 In sum, Lucas and Reilly I, supported by the purposes underlying the antitrust statutes, compel 21 this Court to find that plaintiff has raised a genuine issue as to whether he has valid antitrust injury in 22 this case. “Consumers in the market where trade is allegedly restrained are presumptively the proper 23 plaintiffs to allege antitrust injury.” Glen Holly, 352 F.3d at 372. Plaintiff here presents evidence that 24 he is “an active participant in the [newspaper] market and” alleges that defendants’ “conduct in that 25 market violate[s]” the Sherman Act.³ Lucas, 140 F.3d at 1237. This is “sufficient to avoid summary
 26

27 ³Plaintiff is not, however, an “active participant” in the Bay Area newspaper advertising market.
 28 Apart from a handful of advertisements placed in the Chronicle by two limited liability companies in which plaintiff is a shareholder, plaintiff has not engaged in any advertising in Bay Area newspapers.
 A shareholder has no standing to assert a claim based on an injury to a corporation. See Shell

1 judgment on [plaintiff's] Clayton Act . . . claim for equitable relief.” Id. For the foregoing reasons and 2 for good cause shown, the Court concludes that plaintiff has standing to assert his Clayton Act claims,
3 and DENIES defendants’ motion for summary judgment.

27 Petroleum, N.V. v. Graves, 709 F.2d 593, 595 (9th Cir. 1983). Furthermore, in deposition plaintiff
28 offered no more than a vague plan “in my head” to do some future advertising in Bay Area newspapers.
See generally Scarborough Decl., Ex. A (Reilly Dep.) at 180-183. Plaintiff therefore does not have standing as a consumer of newspaper advertising space.
